

FILED & ENTERED

SEP 23 2016

CLERK U.S. BANKRUPTCY COURT
Central District of California
BY tatum DEPUTY CLERK

UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT
CENTRAL DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
LOS ANGELES DIVISION

In re:

JOSEPH ELLISON,

Debtor.

Case No. 2:14-bk-24463-RK

Chapter 7

Adv. No. 2:15-ap-01001-RK

JP MORGAN CHASE BANK, N.A., JP MORGAN SECURITIES, LLC,

Plaintiffs,

vs.

JOSEPH ELLISON,

Defendant.

MEMORANDUM DECISION ON PLAINTIFFS' ADVERSARY COMPLAINT
OBJECTING TO ENTRY OF DISCHARGE
PURSUANT TO 11 U.S.C. §§ 727(a)(2)(A)
AND (a)(2)(B)

The above-captioned adversary proceeding on the complaint of plaintiffs JP Morgan Chase Bank, N.A. and JP Morgan Securities, LLC ("Plaintiffs" or collectively, "JPMorgan"), asserting claims objecting to discharge of defendant Joseph Ellison ("Defendant"), Debtor, under 11 U.S.C. §§ 727(a)(2)(A) and (a)(2)(B) came on for trial before the undersigned United States Bankruptcy Judge on November 19, 2015. Bryant S. Delgadillo, of the law firm of Wargo & French LLP, appeared for Plaintiffs. David S. Hagen, of the Law Offices of David S. Hagen, appeared for Defendant.

1 After trial, on January 15, 2016, Plaintiffs lodged their Proposed Findings of Fact 2 and Conclusions of Law, and on February 1, 2016, Defendant lodged his Proposed 3 Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law. ECF 26 and 27. On February 4, 2016, 4 Defendant filed objections to Plaintiffs' Proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions of 5 Law. ECF 28. Afterwards, the court then took the matter under submission.

6 Having considered the witness testimony and exhibits received at trial, and the 7 other matters in evidence, the court hereby makes the following findings of fact and 8 conclusions of law pursuant to Rule 7052 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure 9 and Rule 52 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.<sup>1</sup>

10 FINDINGS OF FACT

11 Findings of Fact 1 through 39 are undisputed facts that were established through 12 the Pre-Trial Stipulation for Claims for Relief, ECF 22, which the parties jointly filed and 13 was approved by the court in its Order Approving Joint Pretrial Stipulation and Setting 14 Trial Date, ECF 24.

15 1. Defendant was employed by JPMorgan as a financial advisor until 16 approximately April 2012.

17 2. During the course of his employment, Defendant developed an animus towards 18 JPMorgan.

19 3. In or about June 2012, Defendant initiated an arbitration action against 20 JPMorgan before a Financial Regulatory Authority panel, FINRA case number 12-02244 21 ("FINRA Action"), by asserting various claims related to his employment.

22 4. JPMorgan filed a counterclaim in the FINRA Action for breach of contract 23 related to a loan, in the approximate amount of $750,000, that Defendant obtained from 24 JPMorgan as part of his employment, but failed to repay.

25
26 _____
27 <sup>1</sup> Any findings of fact that should be properly characterized as conclusions of law will be 28 considered as such, and any conclusions of law that should be properly characterized as findings of fact will be considered as such.

1 5. During the FINRA Action, Defendant was represented by counsel. His original 2 counsel, Shustak & Partners LLP ("Shustak"), was replaced during the proceeding as the 3 result of a fee dispute.

4 6. Defendant's replacement counsel, Jeffrey Sigler, represented Defendant on a 5 contingency basis.

6 7. The FINRA panel conducted an evidentiary hearing from April 28, 2014 to May 7 6, 2014.

8 8. On or about June 3, 2014, the FINRA panel found against Defendant on his 9 claims and in favor of JPMorgan on its counterclaim, entering an award in favor of 10 JPMorgan in the amount of $789,624.06 ("FINRA Award").

11 9. On July 17, 2014, JPMorgan initiated a proceeding with the United States 12 District Court for the Central District of California, case number CV14-05567, for judicial 13 confirmation of the FINRA Award ("FINRA Award Confirmation Action").

14 10. Less than two weeks later, on July 29, 2014, Defendant filed a voluntary 15 petition for relief under chapter 7 of Title 11 of the United States Code ("Petition Date"), 16 thereby initiating bankruptcy case number 2:14-bk-24463-RK, in the U.S. Bankruptcy 17 Court for the Central District of California, Los Angeles Division ("Bankruptcy Case").

18 11. The FINRA Award Confirmation Action was stayed as a result of Defendant 19 filing the Bankruptcy Case. See 11 U.S.C. § 362(a).

20 12. In the Schedule F filed concurrently with the petition in the Bankruptcy Case, 21 Defendant reported unsecured debts totaling $926,506.00, including: (1) $789,000 owed 22 to JPMorgan on account of the FINRA Award (not listed as disputed, contingent, or 23 unliquidated); and (2) $45,000 owed to Shustak related to the attorney fee dispute (listed 24 as disputed).

25 13. JPMorgan and Shustak are Defendant's two largest unsecured creditors and 26 the debts owed to them account for approximately 90 percent of all of the Defendant's 27 unsecured debt.

1 14. Eleven Sixteen LLLP is a limited liability company was [sic] created in January 2 2014. [LLLPP refers to limited liability limited partnership. See Plaintiff's Exhibit 9, Proof of 3 Claim No. 2, filed by Wood, Erickson & Whittaker on April 27, 2015, referring to billing 4 statement for "Drafting and formation of limited liability limited partnership: Eleven Sixteen 5 LLLP [Flat fee] Amount - $7,500.00".]

6 15. Defendant admits that he retained a firm to form a trust and limited liability 7 partnership, but denies that he formed or created Eleven Sixteen LLLP.

8 16. Defendant and his wife, Ellen Ellison, are the owners of the residential real 9 property located at 555 S. Norton Avenue, Los Angeles, California 90020 ("Property").

10 17. In addition to the Property, Defendant holds interests in various bank accounts
11 including: (1) Joseph Ellison ITF Ellen Ellison, City National Bank, account ending 1756 12 ("Defendant's CNB Account"); and (2) Joseph Ellison and Ellen Ellison Joint WROS, 13 Mutual Securities, Inc., account ending 9350 ("Joint Account").

14 18. While the FINRA Action was pending, on or about February 14, 2014, 15 Defendant and his wife obtained a loan, in the principal amount of $1,496,500 from 16 Greenbox Loans, Inc. ("First DOT"). Dovenmuehle Mortgage, Inc. is the current servicer 17 of the First DOT. [The court understands that "DOT" refers to a Deed of Trust securing a 18 loan on Defendant's residence. See Plaintiff's Exhibit 8, Voluntary Petition for Relief and 19 Schedules filed on July 29, 2014, referring to Schedule D listing "1st trust deed on 20 residence" held by Dovenmuehle Mortgage Inc.; Defendant's Exhibit A, Closing 21 Statement, referring to loan by Greenbox Loans, Inc., to Joseph Ellison and Ellen 22 Ellison.].

23 19. The funds from the First DOT were disbursed as follows: (1) payoff of a deed 24 of trust in favor of Ocwen Loan Servicing in the approximate amount of $605,728.11; (2) 25 payoff of deed of trust in favor of Morgan Stanley Home Loans in the approximate 26 amount of $742,802.77; and (3) disbursement in the approximate amount of $69,441.17 27 to Defendant's CNB Account.

1           20. Additionally, while the FINRA Action was pending, on or about February 28, 2 2014, Defendant and his wife obtained a loan, in the principal amount of $200,000 from 3 Brian Dror and Rafael Ryzman ("Second DOT"). Logan Investments is the current 4 servicer of the Second DOT.

5           21. The funds from the Second DOT, in the approximate amount of $178,509.68, 6 were disbursed to Defendant's CNB Account.

7           22. The First DOT and Second DOT fully encumbered the Property (reflecting 8 value of the property of $1,500,000 and encumbered with debts totaling $1,716,551.00).

9           23. On or about March 1, 2014, the funds disbursed to Defendant from the First 10 DOT and the Second DOT, totaling $247,950.85, were in Defendant's CNB account.

11           24. Later that same month, Defendant transferred a total of $38,000 to two of his 12 friends, Ed Jeffers and Charles Springer. Defendant testified that he was repaying one 13 personal and one business project loan to these individuals, although the purported 14 business loan was to pay for Defendant's living expenses.

15           25. While the FINRA Action was pending and shortly after the evidentiary hearing 16 in the matter concluded, on or about May 12, 2014, Defendant transferred $18,000 from 17 Defendant's CNB Account to an account held by the Law Offices of Ellen Ellison, at City 18 National Bank, account ending 5499 ("Wife's CNB Account").

19           26. Approximately one week after the issuance of the FINRA Award, on or about 20 June 10 and June 11, 2014, Defendant transferred, through two transactions, a total of 21 $51,000 from Defendant's CNB Account to his Wife's CNB account.

22           27. Less than two weeks after the entry of the FINRA Award, on or about June 16, 23 2014, Defendant transferred $121,000 from Defendant's CNB Account to the corporate 24 account of Clownputsch, Inc., a corporation wholly owned by Defendant, at City National 25 Bank, account ending in 7881 ("Clownputsch Account").

1 28. Defendant testified during the 2004 examination that he transferred the funds, 2 in part, because he was afraid people were going to take all his money away and leave 3 his family destitute.

4 29. Defendant retained bankruptcy counsel on or about June 15, 2014.

5 30. On or about June 21, 2014, Defendant transferred $119,000 from Clownputsch 6 Account to Defendant's CNB Account.

7 31. On or about July 9, 2014, six days after receiving notice of the FINRA Award
8 against him and three weeks before filing his petition, Defendant transferred $41,415.30 9 from Defendant's CNB Account to Dovenmuehle Mortgage, thereby prepaying the First 10 DOT for six months<sup>2</sup>.

11 32. Also on or about July 9, 2014, Defendant transferred $11,062 from 12 Defendant's CNB Account to Logan Investments, thereby prepaying the Second DOT for 13 six months.<sup>3</sup>

14 33. Defendant testified at his 2004 Examination as follows:

15
16 A. Well, at the time that the payments were made -- let's see. . . . July 17 was the prepayment[,] by then the case had been decided, and I 18 didn't know what I was going to do. Really, we were trying to make 19 up our mind what we were going to do, and then I just wanted to 20 make sure that those -- that whatever happened -- I mean, I got a threatening letter. I got threatening letters from the beginnings of what might have been attempts to collect money or whatever, and I just wanted to make sure that we wouldn't be thrown out in the street.

21 Q. And who did those letters come from?

22 A. Well, I got -- well, the award in and of itself was pretty 23 breathtaking. When I got the notice of the award, that was F.I.N.R.A., 24 and the F.I.N.R.A. fees. I didn't know if I would lose my license. I didn't. J.P. Morgan, obviously, they had sent me by July -- yeah.
They had sent me a letter by then saying they wanted their money.
And who else was there? I was having a fee disputes. That's another thing. I was having a fee dispute. I found out that I was 25 <sup>2</sup> Although the parties stipulated that Defendant prepaid both the First and Second DOT by six 26 months, as clarified by Defendant's testimony at trial, it appears that the six month figure included 27 the then currently due monthly payment, and thus, the court finds that Defendant prepaid the First and Second DOT by five months, not six months. Trial Testimony of Joseph Ellison, November 19, 2015 at 9:22-9:23 a.m.

28 <sup>3</sup> Supra note 2.

1 grossly overcharged by the attorneys I used first, and I got several 2 attorneys' opinions, and so I was possibly fighting with them.
Whatever else was going to go on, I wanted to make sure my family was at least ensconced in our home until the end of the year.

3 [. . .]

4 Its a priority of survival. I wanted to make sure we had a home to live 5 in and a place to live in while all this was going on.

6 Q. So if you had kept the funds in your city national bank account, 7 why wouldn't they have been there for you to be able to pay your mortgage?

8 A. Well, I didn't know if, for example, Shustak had gotten a judgment, 9 which he didn't. They threw him out of court, but he kept trying to do 10 things. I didn't know where -- I felt under siege. I guess you can 11 understand that. So I had to prioritize where this money went, and other than food and other -- certain other things that had to be accounted -- you know, taken care of. This was a pretty important piece of that puzzle.

12 Q. Okay. So were [you] concerned that Shustak might get the judgment and then take the money?

13 A. That was a possibility. I thought I had -- I mean, I had a few 14 disputes. I reported . . . .

15 Q. Were you concerned that the money would have gone to J.P.
Morgan?

16 A. I don't remember my thinking about that. But I remember thinking, 17 "if I don't keep a roof over our heads right now, we're going to be in a lot of trouble."

18 34. Defendant further testified that he "had to prioritize where this money went" 19 and that repayment of the First DOT and Second DOT "was a pretty important piece of 20 that puzzle."

21 35. The funds transferred to Dovenmuehle Mortgage and Logan Investments, 22 totaling $52,477.30 are not available for distribution to Defendant's unsecured creditors.

23 36. Defendant transferred, through four separate transactions, a total of $31,600 24 from the non-exempt Joint Account to various destinations. This included a transfer of 25 $17,000.00 to his wife on the Petition Date.

26 37. The four transactions posted to the Joint Account after the Petition Date.
27
28

1 38. As a result of the four transfers, the balance of the Joint Account decreased 2 from $33,494.92 to $1,895.02.

3 39. Defendant disclosed a balance for the Joint Account of $1,895.02 in the 4 Schedule B.

5 40. The parties in their Pre-Trial Stipulation for Claims for Relief, ECF 22, 6 designated the following as Disputed Fact 1 for determination at trial:

7 8 [Disputed Fact] "1. Defendant's bankruptcy schedules and statement of financial 9 affairs did not disclose any interest in a limited liability limited partnership, or a bank 10 account in the name of a company owned by the Defendant, Clownputsch, Inc."

11 The court finds that this disputed fact is not supported by a preponderance of the 12 evidence because Defendant's Schedule B-Personal Property, Petition, Exhibit 8 at 16, 13 disclosed the existence of Clownputsch, Inc.

14 41. The parties in their Pre-Trial Stipulation for Claims for Relief, ECF 22, 15 designated the following as Disputed Fact 2 for determination at trial:

16
17 [Disputed Fact] "2. Defendant held no interest in his Wife's CNB Account."

18 The court finds that this disputed fact is not supported by a preponderance of the 19 evidence. Based on California Family Code § 760 and In re Marriage of Braud, 45 20 Cal.App.4th 797, 822-823 (1996), the court finds that the evidence shows that Defendant 21 had a community property interest in the funds in his Wife's CNB Account. At trial, 22 Defendant testified that he was not involved in opening his Wife's CNB Account, which 23 belonged to his wife's law practice, that he was not a signatory on that account, that he 24 had no control over the account, that he had nothing to do with the account and that he 25 was not a member of his wife's law practice. Trial Testimony of Joseph Ellison, 26 November 19, 2015 at 9:17-9:18 a.m. Although Defendant's testimony on these points is 27 credible and although Defendant listed the account as his wife's personal checking 28

1 account on his bankruptcy schedules, the court gives more weight to other admitted 2 evidence. First, the court observes that Defendant listed his Wife's CNB Account as 3 community property on Defendant's Schedule B, Exhibit 8 at 14, and claimed a 4 $24,925.00 exemption in that account, whose value on the Petition Date was scheduled 5 at $25,793.00 pursuant to Defendant's Schedule C, Exhibit 8 at 20. Further, even if 6 Defendant's Wife's CNB Account was his wife's separate property, because community 7 property was commingled with separate property in Wife's CNB Account, and because no 8 evidence was presented tracing the source of any separate funds, the court determines 9 that based upon the admitted evidence, Defendant has a community property interest in 10 the funds in his Wife's CNB Account. That is, given that less than three months before 11 the Petition Date, shortly after Defendant refinanced the Property, Defendant transferred 12 at least $69,000.00 to his Wife's CNB Account from the refinancing of the Property, which 13 Defendant listed as community property on Defendant's Schedule A, Exhibit 8 at 13, and 14 given that no evidence was presented tracing the funds in his Wife's CNB Account to a 15 separate property source and no other evidence was admitted regarding the 16 characterization of the Property, the court determines that Defendant had a community 17 interest in his Wife's CNB Account. In re Marriage of Braud, 45 Cal.App.4th at 822-823 18 (citations omitted) ("[T]he mere commingling of separate property and community 19 property funds does not alter the status of the respective property interests, provided that 20 the components of the commingled mass can be adequately traced to their separate 21 property and community property sources. But if the separate property and community 22 property interests have been commingled in such a manner that the respective 23 contributions cannot be traced and identified, the entire commingled fund will be deemed 24 community property pursuant to the general community property presumption of section 25 760.").

26 42. The parties in their Pre-Trial Stipulation for Claims for Relief, ECF 22, 27 designated the following as Disputed Fact 3 for determination at trial:
28

1 [Disputed Fact] 3. Defendant prepaid the First DOT and Second DOT
2 because he had received a collection letter related to the FINRA 3 Award and had a fee dispute pending with Shustak, and wanted to ensure that his family could remain in the Property and that the funds used for the prepayment would not go to pay any judgment obtained by Shustak.

4 As discussed in detail below, the court finds this disputed fact to be supported 5 by a preponderance of the evidence.

6 43. There are no liens on Defendant's CNB Account or the Joint Account.

7 Finding of Fact 43 was established through the Order on Plaintiffs JPMorgan 8 Chase, N.A. and J.P. Morgan Securities, LLC's Motion for Summary Judgment, ECF 19, 9 which treated certain facts as established pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 10 56(g), but was left out of the parties Pre-Trial Stipulation for Claims for Relief, ECF 22.
11 See ECF 11, Exhibit 10, Proposed Uncontroverted Fact No. 18.

12 In addition to the findings of fact set forth above, the court makes the following 13 findings of fact based on the testimony at trial.

14 44. As indicated by Defendant's testimony that less than one month after the 15 FINRA award, he thought of prepaying the loans secured by DOTs on his residence by 16 five months because "I had the money at that time and I wanted to make sure my family 17 was protected and that I had paid my primary obligation to them for that period of time," 18 Trial Testimony of Joseph Ellison, November 19, 2015 at 9:22-9:23 a.m., and that a 19 primary motivation behind his home loan prepayments was that he was concerned about 20 his prior lawyer, who he was having a fee dispute with, and who has a disputed claim in 21 Defendant's bankruptcy case, "from coming in and attaching his assets," Trial Testimony 22 of Joseph Ellison, November 19, 2015 at 9:24-9:25 a.m., such loan prepayments by 23 Defendant indicate an intent on his part to hinder or delay payment of his non-preferred 24 creditors, including Shustak, his prior lawyer, and JPMorgan, the FINRA awardee, in 25 taking his nonexempt home equity to prepay the preferred home loan lenders holding 26 DOTs on the home where he and his family resided.

1           45. As indicated by Defendant's testimony that he prepaid Dovenmuehle
2 Mortgage, the servicer for the First DOT on the Property, roughly $40,000.00 (i.e., 3 $41,415.30), and Logan Investments, the servicer for the Second DOT on the Property, 4 roughly $11,000.00 (i.e., $11,062.00), "to assure that my wife and my daughter and 5 myself had a home to live in through the end of the year . . . I did prepay [the home loans 6 in the past] but not to that degree, not six months, or four months, five months, whatever 7 it was in advance, normally." Trial Testimony of Joseph Ellison, November 19, 2015 at 8 10:43 a.m., the number of advance mortgage payments were admittedly out of the 9 ordinary and further indicate an intent to hinder or delay payment of his non-preferred 10 creditors.

11           46. As indicated by Defendant's testimony that prior to filing his bankruptcy 12 petition, he met with an asset protection firm, and one of his goals in doing so, was to 13 potentially protect his assets from potential creditors, Trial Testimony of Joseph Ellison, 14 November 19, 2015 at 10:58-10:59 a.m., and while he changed his mind about using the 15 asset protection firm, the evidence of his consideration, meeting and paying the asset 16 protection firm supports a finding that Defendant intended to hinder or delay his non-17 preferred creditors.

18           47. From his refinancing of the Property, Defendant took out cash of almost 19 $250,000.00 (i.e., $247,950.85) from the equity in the Property. Trial Testimony of 20 Joseph Ellison, November 19, 2015 at 9:15 a.m.; see also, Finding of Fact No. 23, supra.

21           48. As stated on his bankruptcy schedules, as of the Petition Date, Defendant had 22 $600.00 in his CNB Account, for which he did not claim an exemption. Exhibit 8 at 14
23 and 20. Furthermore, as stated on his bankruptcy schedules, as of the Petition Date, 24 Defendant had $1,894.00 in the Joint Account, for which he did not claim an exemption.
25 Id.

26           ///

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Under 11 U.S.C. § 727,

[t]he court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless . . . the debtor, with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud a creditor or an officer of the estate charged with custody of property under this title, has transferred, removed, destroyed, mutilated, or concealed, or has permitted to be transferred, removed, destroyed, mutilated, or concealed[,] (A) property of the debtor, within one year before the date of the filing of the petition; or (B) property of the estate, after the date of the filing of the petition.

11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2).

A party seeking denial of discharge under § 727(a)(2) must prove two things: “(1) a disposition of property, such as transfer or concealment, and (2) a subjective intent on the debtor's part to hinder, delay or defraud a creditor through the act [of] disposing of the property.” Hughes v. Lawson (In re Lawson), 122 F.3d 1237, 1240 (9th Cir. 1997); accord, In re Retz, 606 F.3d 1189, 1200 (9th Cir. 2010); Cooke v. Renshaw (In re Cooke), 2016 WL 4039699, slip op. at *5 (9th Cir. BAP 2016), appeal pending, No. 16-60068 (9th Cir., notice of appeal filed on August 5, 2016). Under 11 U.S.C. § 101(54), “The term ‘transfer’ means . . . (D) each mode, direct or indirect, absolute or conditional, voluntary or involuntary, of disposing of or parting with— (i) property; or (ii) an interest in property.” “Those objecting to discharge ‘bear [ ] the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that [the debtor’s] discharge should be denied.” In re Retz, 606 F.3d at 1196, quoting, Khalil v. Developers Surety & Indemnity Co. (In re Khalil), 379 B.R. 163, 172 (9th Cir. BAP 2007), affirmed, 578 F.3d 1167, 1168 (9th Cir. 2009); see also, Beverly v. Beverly (In re Beverly), 374 B.R. 221, 243 (9th Cir. BAP 2007) (“The burden of proof on an objection to discharge under § 727(a)(2) is preponderance of the evidence.”), affirmed in part and appeal dismissed in part, 551 F.3d 1092 (9th Cir. 2008), citing inter alia, Grogan v. Garner, 498 U.S. 279, 289 (1991).

“In keeping with the ‘fresh start’ purposes behind the Bankruptcy Code, courts should construe § 727 liberally in favor of debtors and strictly against parties objecting to discharge.” In re Retz, 606 F.3d at 1196, quoting, Bernard v. Sheaffer (In re Bernard), 96

1 F.3d 1279, 1281 (9th Cir. 1996). While “[t]his does not alter the burden on the objector, 2 [it] rather means that ‘actual, rather than constructive intent is required’ on the part of 3 debtor.” In re Retz, 606 F.3d at 1196, quoting, In re Khalil, 379 B.R. at 172.

4 I. Prepetition Transfers Under 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(A)

5 The court first addresses the relevant prepetition transfers at issue in this case 6 under 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(A). As explained in more detail below, based on evidence of 7 Defendant’s prepetition transfers and of his intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors 8 JPMorgan and Shustak, his prior lawyer, the court determines that Defendant’s discharge 9 should be denied pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(A).

10 Within one year prior to filing his bankruptcy petition, Defendant refinanced the 11 Property by taking out a loan in the principal amount of $1,496,500.00 secured by the 12 First DOT in favor of Greenbox Loans, Inc., used the $1,496,500.00 to pay off the 13 previous first deed of trust to Ocwen Loan Servicing and the previous second deed of 14 trust to Morgan Stanley Home Loans in the amounts of $605,728.11 and $742,802.77
15 respectively, deposited the remaining $69,441.17 in Defendant’s CNB account, took out 16 another loan in the amount of $200,000.00 secured by the Second DOT in favor of Brian 17 Dror and Rafael Ryzman, and then deposited $178,509.68 of the $200,000.00 in 18 Defendant’s CNB account. Subsequently, from the refinancing proceeds deposited into 19 Defendant’s CNB account, Defendant transferred $38,000.00 to two friends, Ed Jeffers 20 and Charles Springer, allegedly in satisfaction of two debts owed to them, separately 21 transferred $18,000.00 and $51,000.00 from Defendant’s CNB Account to his Wife’s CNB 22 Account, and transferred $41,415.30 to Dovenmuehle Mortgage and $11,062.00 to 23 Logan Investments, thereby prepaying the loans secured by the First and Second DOTs 24 on the Property by five months. At or just before the petition date, Defendant also 25 transferred $31,600.00 from Defendant’s non-exempt Joint Account to various 26 destinations, including a $17,000.00 transfer to his wife on the Petition Date. Because all 27 of the above-described acts involved the disposition of or parting with of property within 28

1 the statutory time period, the court determines that each of the above-described acts 2 constitute transfers under the first Lawson element.

3       Additionally, Defendant transferred $121,000.00 from Defendant's CNB Account
4 into the Clownsputsch Account, then transferred $119,000.00 from the Clownsputsch 5 Account back to Defendant's CNB Account. The court determines that the net of 6 $2,000.00 that remained in the Clownsputsch Account constitutes a transfer under 7 Lawson because the $2,000.00 was disposed of or parted with, but the $119,000.00 that 8 was transferred back to Defendant's CNB Account does not constitute a transfer under 9 Lawson because that money did not remain in the Clownsputsch Account. 4 March, 10 Ahart and Shapiro, California Practice Guide: Bankruptcy, ¶ 22:856 at 22-118 (2015) 11 ("For purposes of § 727(a)(2), 'transferred' means 'transferred and remained transferred.'" 12 I.e., a debtor who fraudulently transfers property out of the bankruptcy estate during the 13 one-year prepetition period but then returns the property to the estate before filing the 14 petition may still receive a discharge.") (emphasis in original), citing, In re Adeeb, 787 15 F.2d at 1339, 1344-1345 (9th Cir. 1986).

16           A. Both Intent to Hinder and Intent to Delay are Individually
17           Sufficient to Deny a Debtor's Discharge Under 11 U.S.C. § 18           727(a)(2)

19       Regarding the second Lawson element, the intent element, "[a] debtor's intent 20 does not need to be fraudulent to meet the requirements of 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2). In re 21 Retz, 606 F.3d at 1200. "Because the language of the statute is in the disjunctive, it is 22 sufficient if the debtor's intent is to hinder or delay a creditor." Id., citing, In re Bernard, 23 96 F.3d at 1281; accord, In re Cooke, 2016 WL 4039699, slip op. at *5; see also, 6
24 Resnick and Sommer, Collier on Bankruptcy, ¶ 727.02[3][a] at 727-17 (16th ed. 2016)
25 ("The language of section 727(a)(2), drawn from the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance 26 Act, implies that the debtor must have intent to defraud a creditor or officer of the estate.
27 However, some courts have found that, under a literal reading of the language, an intent 28

1 to hinder or delay creditors, even if not fraudulent, may be sufficient to warrant denial of 2 discharge.”) (footnotes and citations omitted), citing inter alia, In re Retz, supra; First 3 Beverly Bank v. Adeeb, 787 F.2d 1339, 1343 (9th Cir. 1986) (concluding that trial court’s 4 finding that the debtor “acted with actual intent to hinder or delay a creditor” was not 5 clearly erroneous based on the debtor’s admission that “he transferred the property 6 intending to put it out of the reach of one of his creditors”); but see, In re Cooke, 2016 WL 7 4039699, slip op. at *9 (Taylor, J., dissenting) (noting the bankruptcy court and the 8 majority opinion affirming the bankruptcy court “fail to cite a single reported Ninth Circuit 9 or Panel decision where a court denied discharge based on efforts to hinder or delay that 10 did not involve deceit or other objectively or subjectively improper conduct”); cf., Acequia, 11 Inc. v. Clinton (In re Acequia, Inc.), 34 F.3d 800, 804-812 (9th Cir. 1994) (reviewing for 12 clear error and affirming trial court’s holding and sustaining reorganized debtor’s 13 fraudulent transfer claims under 11 U.S.C. §§ 544(b) and 548(a)(1) against debtor’s 14 insider as transferee of corporate funds based on factual findings that the insider caused 15 debtor to transfer the funds with intent to hinder or delay debtor’s creditors); Pioneer
16 Liquidating Corp. v. San Diego Trust & Savings Bank, 211 B.R. 704, 717 (S.D. Cal. 1997) 17 (stating that “the purpose of fraudulent transfer recovery is to prevent a debtor from 18 putting assets otherwise available to its creditors out of their reach”), citing and quoting, 19 Jack F. Williams, Revisiting the Proper Limits of Fraudulent Transfer Law, 8 Bankr. Dev.
20 J. 55, 128 (1991) (“In our quest to understand fraudulent transfer liability, we often 21 overlook first principles. At its core, fraudulent transfer law is a debt-collection device and 22 not a revenue generating tool; its mission is to prevent the unjust diminution of the 23 debtor’s estate.”).

24 “The intent to hinder or delay [for purposes of 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(A)] ‘is a 25 question of fact that requires the trier of fact to delve into the mind of the debtor and may 26 be inferred from surrounding circumstances.’” In re Cooke, 2016 WL 4039699, slip op. at 27 *6, citing, Searles v. Riley (In re Searles), 317 B.R. 368, 379 (9th Cir. BAP 2004), 28

1 affirmed in an unpublished decision, 212 Fed. Appx. 589 (9th Cir. 2006), citing, Emmett
2 Valley Associates v. Woodfield (In re Woodfield), 978 F.2d 516, 518 (9th Cir. 1992).
3 Furthermore, intent for purposes of 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2) may be inferred from the 4 surrounding circumstances, including certain “badges of fraud” that constitute 5 circumstantial evidence of intent:

6       These factors, not all of which need be present, include 1) a close 7       relationship between the transferor and the transferee; 2) that the transfer 8       was in anticipation of a pending suit; 3) that the transferor Debtor was 9       insolvent or in poor financial condition at the time; 4) that all or substantially 10      all of the Debtor's property was transferred; 5) that the transfer so 11      completely depleted the Debtor's assets that the creditor has been hindered 12      or delayed in recovering any part of the judgment; and 6) that the Debtor 13      received inadequate consideration for the transfer.

14 In re Woodfield, 978 F.2d at 518, citing inter alia, Evans v. Trude, 193 Or. 648, 240 P.2d 15 940, 944 (1952) (citing state court cases listing “badges of “fraud” to infer actual intent to 16 prove fraudulent transfer) and Matter of Ayala, 107 B.R. 274, 274-275 (Bankr. E.D. Cal.
17 1989) (citing federal court cases listing similar but not identical indicia of fraud to prove 18 intent under 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)). “A course of conduct may also be probative of the 19 question of intent.” In re Beverly, 374 B.R. at 243, citing, In re Adeeb, 787 F.2d at 1343.

20       As previously noted, Collier on Bankruptcy commented that the language of 11 21 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2) was drawn from the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act and “implies 22 that the debtor must have intent to defraud a creditor or officer of the estate”, but that 23 citing the Ninth Circuit in In re Retz, “some courts have found that, under a literal reading 24 of the language, an intent to hinder or delay creditors, even if not fraudulent, may be 25 sufficient to warrant denial of discharge.” 6 Resnick and Sommer, Collier on Bankruptcy, 26 ¶ 727.02[3][a] at 727-17 (footnotes and citations omitted). In this court's view, Collier's
27 comment is somewhat overstated because the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act, later 28 the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act, and now the Uniform Voidable Transactions Act, does not draw any distinction in proving actual intent to prove a “fraudulent”, now voidable, transfer, whether to hinder, to delay, or to defraud, because to prove any of 1 these forms of intent stated in the disjunctive may be proven by a common set of factors, 2 or indicia, as indicated by the current California version of the Uniform Fraudulent 3 Conveyance Act, now the Uniform Voidable Transactions Act, California Civil Code § 4 3439.04(a), which provides as follows:

5 (a) A transfer made or obligation incurred by a debtor is voidable as to a 6 creditor, whether the creditor's claim arose before or after the transfer 7 was made or the obligation was incurred, if the debtor made the transfer 8 or incurred the obligation as follows:

9 (1) With actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud any creditor of the debtor.

10 (2) Without receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the 11 transfer or obligation, and the debtor either:

12 (A) Was engaged or was about to engage in a business or a transaction for 13 which the remaining assets of the debtor were unreasonably small in 14 relation to the business or transaction.

15 (B) Intended to incur, or believed or reasonably should have believed that 16 the debtor would incur, debts beyond the debtor's ability to pay as they 17 became due.

18 (b) In determining actual intent under paragraph (1) of subdivision (a), 19 consideration may be given, among other factors, to any or all of the 20 following:

21 (1) Whether the transfer or obligation was to an insider.

22 (2) Whether the debtor retained possession or control of the property 23 transferred after the transfer.

24 (3) Whether the transfer or obligation was disclosed or concealed.

25 (4) Whether before the transfer was made or obligation was incurred, the 26 debtor had been sued or threatened with suit.

27 (5) Whether the transfer was of substantially all the debtor's assets.

28 (6) Whether the debtor absconded.

(7) Whether the debtor removed or concealed assets.

(8) Whether the value of the consideration received by the debtor was reasonably equivalent to the value of the asset transferred or the amount of the obligation incurred.

(9) Whether the debtor was insolvent or became insolvent shortly after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred.

1 (10) Whether the transfer occurred shortly before or shortly after a substantial debt was incurred.

2 (11) Whether the debtor transferred the essential assets of the business to a 3 lienor that transferred the assets to an insider of the debtor.

4 (c) A creditor making a claim for relief under subdivision (a) has the burden of proving the elements of the claim for relief by a preponderance of the 5 evidence.

6 See also, 8 Witkin, California Procedure, Enforcement of Judgment, § 495 at 534-536 (2008 and 2016 Supp.); cf., 5 Resnick and Sommer, Collier on Bankruptcy, ¶ 548.04[1][a] 7 at 548-56 and n. 5 (“The statutory text [of 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(A)] focuses on the 8 debtor’s intent. The debtor must possess an intent to hinder, an intent to delay or an 9 intent to defraud. The requirement is disjunctive; any one of the three intents is sufficient 10 for liability.” citing inter alia, Lippe v. Bairnco Corp., 249 F. Supp. 2d 357, 374 (S.D.N.Y.
11 2003) (“As the use of the disjunctive ‘or’ makes clear, ‘[o]nly an actual intent to hinder and 12 delay need be established, not an actual intent to defraud.’”) (citation omitted).

13 The words “hinder,” “delay” and “defraud” used to describe the intent required 14 under 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2) are not defined terms under the Bankruptcy Code. See 11 15 U.S.C. § 101. The meaning of these terms comes from the common law and is codified 16 in the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act, now the Uniform Voidable Transactions Act.
17 See In re Woodfield, 978 F.2d at 518, citing inter alia, Evans v. Trude, supra, and Matter 18 of Ayala, supra. The terms of hinder, delay and defraud connote intentional actions by a 19 debtor to frustrate or thwart collection by creditors and describe a continuum of intents 20 that may differ temporally or in substance and effect, but each of which is impermissible 21 for purposes of 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2). The dictionary definitions of these words reinforce 22 these observations. The word “hinder” has been defined as a transitive verb: “1. To be or 23 get in the way of. 2. To obstruct or delay the progress of.” The American Heritage 24 Dictionary of the English Language at 830 (4th ed. 2006). The word “delay” has been 25 defined as a transitive verb: “1. To postpone until a later time; defer. 2. To cause to be 26 later or slower than expected or desired.” Id. at 480. The word “defraud” has been 27 defined as a transitive verb: “To take something by fraud; swindle.” Id. at 477. The word 28

1 “fraud”, in turn, has been defined as a noun: “1. A deception deliberately practiced in 2 order to secure unfair or unlawful gain. 2. A piece of trickery; a trick . . .” Id. at 699.

3 B. An Examination of In re Cooke and Hultman v. Tevis: the Court 4 May Consider Prepetition Preferential Payments to Creditors for 5 Purposes of Determining Whether There is Intent to Hinder,
6 Delay or Defraud Under 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(A)

7 Before the court addresses whether, under Lawson, Defendant’s pre-bankruptcy 8 acts of using non-exempt assets to pay, and thus prefer, some creditors, including the 9 home loan lenders holding the First and Second DOTs on the Property, and his friends 10 as well as an insider, his wife, involved the requisite actual intent to hinder, delay or 11 defraud a creditor, the court must also carefully consider the overlay between the intent 12 to prefer creditors and the intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors. “The intent to 13 prefer creditors is not equivalent to the intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors.” 6 14 Resnick and Sommer, Collier on Bankruptcy, ¶ 727.02[3][c] at 727-19, citing inter alia, 15 Equitable Bank v. Miller (In re Miller), 39 F.3d 301 (11th Cir. 1994) and In re Richter, 57
16 F.2d 159 (2d Cir. 1932); see also, In re Chu, 511 B.R. 681, 685 (Bankr. D. Hawaii 2014) 17 (“An intent to prefer one creditor over others is not necessarily the same as an intent to 18 hinder, delay, or defraud creditors.”). A transfer preferring one creditor over another does 19 not amount to an act to “hinder, delay, or defraud” an unpreferred creditor. 8 Witkin, 20 California Procedure, Enforcement of Judgment, § 495 at 534, citing inter alia, California 21 Civil Code § 3432 and Wyzard v. Goller, 23 Cal.App.4th 1183 (1994); see also, Hultman 22 v. Tevis, 82 F.2d 940, 941 (9th Cir. 1936) (mere fact of a preferential transfer does not 23 establish an act to “hinder, delay or defraud” creditor to deny discharge). Nonetheless, in 24 this court’s view, as discussed below, even if the intent to prefer creditors is not 25 equivalent to the intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors, the intent to prefer creditors 26 may still coincide with the intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors if there is other 27 evidence of intent as was recently held by a divided Bankruptcy Appellate Panel of the 28

1 Ninth Circuit (“BAP”) in an unpublished memorandum decision in In re Cooke, 2016 WL
2 4039699, slip op. at *1-8 (majority opinion) and at *8-17 (Taylor, J., dissenting), affirming 3 a decision of another judge of this court (the Honorable Peter H. Carroll); cf., 5 Resnick
4 and Sommer, Collier on Bankruptcy, ¶ 548.04[1][a] at 548-57 and n. 6 (“The requisite
5 actual intent [to hinder, delay or defraud to prove fraudulent transfer under 11 U.S.C. § 6 548(a)(1)(A)], however, must be something more than just an intent to prefer one creditor
7 over another.” citing inter alia, Stone v. Abraham (In re Prestige Spring Corp.), 628 F.2d 8 840, 842-843 (4th Cir. 1980). For purposes of determining whether the court may 9 consider prepetition preferential payments to creditors when determining whether there is 10 intent to hinder, delay or defraud under 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(A), the court now examines 11 the BAP’s decision in Cooke and the Ninth Circuit’s decision in Hultman.

12 In Cooke, the debtor and the judgment creditor were involved in a multi-vehicle 13 accident in which the creditor, a former fireman, was seriously and permanently injured.
14 Id., slip op. at *1. The judgment creditor sued the debtor in state court for negligence and 15 the debtor who was insured was defended by the counsel retained by the insurance 16 company. Id. The state court entered a judgment in favor of the judgment creditor 17 against the debtor of $1.6 million, and in October 2012, the insurance company paid the 18 judgment creditor directly the amount of the policy limits of $250,000. Id. The debtor’s 19 insurance policy also provided for certain supplemental payments to be made on behalf 20 of the debtor as the insured, including postjudgment interest, which was $45,147.62 as of 21 the date the insurance company paid the judgment creditor on the judgment. Id. On 22 November 13, 2012, the insurer mailed a check for the postjudgment interest to the 23 debtor, who deposited the check in his checking account on November 19, 2012. Id., slip 24 op at *1-2. On November 30, 2012, the debtor filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy case in this 25 court; however, shortly before filing his Chapter 7 bankruptcy case, he spent 26 approximately $30,000 from the insurance payment not to the judgment creditor on the 27 judgment, but for other purposes, including: (1) $1,040 in cash paid for miscellaneous 28

1 items, $1,040; (2) $5,600 for on-campus housing at the university he was attending for 2 the upcoming quarter; (3) $4,670 for tuition and fees to the university for the upcoming 3 quarter; (4) $11,000 for taxes on the insurance payment he received, which was paid to 4 the IRS; (5) $4,306 for bankruptcy attorney and filing fees; (6) $2,800 for taxes on the 5 insurance payment he received, which was paid to the state taxing authority; and (7) 6 $2,500 for the purchase of a personal computer for his use. Id., slip op at *2. The debtor 7 claimed the remaining amount of $14,250 as exempt on his bankruptcy schedules. Id.
8 The judgment creditor filed an adversary proceeding under 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2) against 9 the debtor to deny his discharge. Id., slip op at *3. During his meeting of creditors under 10 11 U.S.C. § 341(a), during an examination under Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 11 2004 by the judgment creditor and during the trial in the adversary proceeding, the debtor 12 gave inconsistent testimony about whether he received and read the letter from the 13 insurance company transmitting the supplemental payment check which told him what 14 the check was for before depositing the check into his account, and he admitted in his 15 testimony that he knew the insurance payment he received represented the interest 16 accrued from the judgment creditor's judgment, that based on his attorney's advice 17 (never disclosed due to the continued assertion of the attorney-client privilege), the 18 debtor concluded that the money from the insurance payment belonged to him and not 19 the judgment creditor, that the judgment creditor might try to collect the money and that 20 he could have given the money to the judgment creditor, but elected to use the money for 21 other purposes, and that he contemplated filing for bankruptcy before depositing the 22 check. Id. and n. 5.

23       Among other things, the bankruptcy court in Cooke found that the debtor intended 24 to hinder or delay the judgment creditor in his ability to collect on the judgment by 25 transferring the funds. Id. Based on the totality of the circumstances, the bankruptcy 26 court believed that the debtor's transfers went beyond legitimate prebankruptcy planning 27 and were done with the intent to keep the funds from the judgment creditor, his most 28

1 significant creditor, and to maximize the benefit of the funds for himself. Id. at *8. The 2 bankruptcy court entered judgment in favor of the judgment creditor, denying the debtor 3 his discharge under 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2), and the Bankruptcy Appellate Panel in a 4 divided vote affirmed.

5 In affirming the bankruptcy court's judgment denying the discharge, the majority in 6 Cooke held that the bankruptcy court applied the correct law articulating the elements for 7 a claim under 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2) and made the necessary findings of fact to 8 determine the debtor's actual intent to hinder or delay the creditor, including inferences 9 and course of conduct that may be considered as circumstantial evidence of intent. Id. at 10 *8. "The party objecting to discharge under § 727(a)(2)(A) must prove two things: (1) the 11 disposition of property, whether by transfer, removal, destruction, mutilation or 12 concealment (within the statutory time period); and (2) the debtor's subjective intent to 13 hinder, delay or defraud a creditor through the act of disposition of the property." Id. at 14 *5, citing, In re Retz, 606 F.3d at 1200, citing, In re Lawson, 122 F.3d at 1240. As to the 15 second Lawson element, the majority held that the bankruptcy court's factual findings of 16 intent were not clearly erroneous because the court could properly have found actual 17 intent to hinder or delay based on the facts and debtor's course of conduct that he made 18 the transfers with the knowledge that he was liable to the judgment creditor in excess of 19 the policy limits, that the supplemental insurance payment was for accrued interest on the 20 judgment owed to the judgment creditor, that the judgment creditor might try to collect the 21 payment from him, that he did not want the judgment creditor to get the payment, and 22 that the debt owed to the judgment creditor was the reason he filed for bankruptcy as he 23 had no other material debt as of the petition date. Id. at *6. The majority finally observed 24 that "[a]lthough two views of the evidence may exist, the court's choice between them in 25 determining that [the debtor] actually intended to hinder or delay, cannot be clearly 26 erroneous." Id. at *8.

27 ///

1 The dissent in Cooke observed that the critical inquiry in the case came down to 2 the question of “what did [the debtor] do with the Funds that would justify the loss of 3 discharge?”, and the dissent’s answer was that “he did nothing that was an appropriate 4 basis for discharge denial under § 727(a)(2)(A).” Id. at *9. Among the eleven reasons 5 that the dissent gave for reversal and possible remand of the bankruptcy court’s 6 judgment denying discharge was that reversal is warranted as a matter of law because 7 the bankruptcy court’s factual finding of intent was based on transfers which it could not 8 consider for purposes of § 727(a)(2)(A). Id. at *9-17.

9 The debtor in Cooke has appealed the judgment of the Bankruptcy Appellate 10 Panel affirming the bankruptcy court to the Ninth Circuit, which will decide the appeal in 11 due course. This court specifically addresses some of the concerns raised in Cooke 12 which are germane to the discussion of the issues in this case, particularly whether 13 reversal is warranted as a matter of law because the bankruptcy court’s factual finding of 14 intent was based on transfers which it could not consider for purposes of 11 U.S.C. § 15 727(a)(2)(A), and in support of that ground for reversal, the dissent in Cooke cited the 16 Ninth Circuit’s decision in Hultman v. Tevis, supra, which was decided under the 17 Bankruptcy Act of 1898 rather than the modern Bankruptcy Code.

18 The facts in Hultman v. Tevis were as follows. 82 F.2d at 940-941. The debtor 19 filed a petition for relief under the Bankruptcy Act and was adjudged a voluntary bankrupt.
20 Id. at 940. The trustee in bankruptcy opposed the petition and sought denial of the 21 debtor’s discharge on two grounds, including the transfer of large sums of money within 22 one year of the petition date to his son with the intent to hinder, delay or defraud his 23 creditors. Id. at 940-941, citing, Bankruptcy Act of 1898, § 14b, as amended by § 6 of the 24 Act of May 27, 1926, c. 406, 44 Stat. 663, former 11 U.S.C § 32(b). The debtor owed a 25 debt to his son, which had not been fully paid. Id. at 941. Debtor began receiving money 26 from a spendthrift trust set up by his sister, and he transferred some of that money to his 27 son within one year of the petition date. Id. The debtor had been advised by his 28

1 attorney, to whom all the facts were fully disclosed, that the money received from the 2 spendthrift trust could not be subjected to the claims of his creditors, even after it reached 3 his hands. Id. The debtor in good faith believed and relied upon the attorney's advice 4 and acted on it in making the transfer to his son. Id. The amount of money that the 5 debtor transferred to his son was less than the amount owed. Id. The special master in 6 bankruptcy made the above findings of fact, which were not excepted to at trial, and 7 further found that the money which the debtor transferred to his son was not transferred 8 with the intent to hinder, delay or defraud his creditors and that the debtor was entitled to 9 a discharge of his debts. Id. The trustee in bankruptcy interposed exceptions to the 10 special master's findings of fact and conclusions of law, but the district court accepted the 11 special master's findings and conclusions granting the debtor a discharge. Id. The Ninth 12 Circuit in Hultman affirmed the district court's judgment upholding the debtor's discharge.
13 In so holding, the Ninth Circuit made two specific observations germane here. Id. First, 14 the Ninth Circuit stated: "Whether [the lawyer's] advice was correct or not is a question 15 which the District Court did not, nor do we, deem it necessary to decide." Id. Second, 16 the Ninth Circuit stated: "The mere fact that a bankrupt has made a preferential payment 17 or transfer to one of his creditors is no ground for denying a discharge." Id. (citations 18 omitted).

19 The dissent in Cooke concluded that "[t]he bankruptcy court here did not 20 acknowledge the rule in Hultman and erroneously relied on [the debtor]'s use of the 21 Funds to pay other creditors." In re Cooke, 2016 WL 4039699, slip op. at *11 (Taylor, J., 22 dissenting). The dissent in Cooke asserted that the majority opinion only addressed one 23 of the two relevant rulings of the Ninth Circuit in Hultman for not denying the debtor's 24 discharge based on reliance of counsel and simply disregarded the other relevant ruling 25 relating to preferential payments. Id. Relying on the Ninth Circuit's statement in Hultman 26 that "[t]hat the mere fact that a bankruptcy has made a preferential payment or transfer to 27 one of his creditors is no grounds for denying a discharge," the dissent in Cooke stated:

1 “Hultman clearly states that payment of legitimate creditor claims, even to insiders, is not 2 a basis for discharge denial. Both the bankruptcy court and the majority ignore this 3 authority; I cannot and do not do so.” Id. In other words, as the dissent stated, “as the 4 Ninth Circuit made clear in Hultman, some transfers do not support discharge denial as a 5 matter of law.” Id. at *12 n. 4.

6 In asserting that reversal in Cooke was warranted as a matter of law because the 7 bankruptcy court’s factual finding was based on transfers which it could not consider for 8 purposes of 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(A), the dissent in Cooke also criticized the majority’s 9 analysis based on another Ninth Circuit decision in In re Adeeb, supra. Id. at *14. The 10 dissent stated:

11 In summary, I would reverse because the bankruptcy court erred as a 12 matter of law when it based its decision almost entirely on [the debtor]’s 13 payment of other debt. Hultman, as recognized by this Panel, does not 14 permit this reliance. I also conclude that the laptop computer acquisition 15 in isolation did not justify § 727(a)(2)(A) denial of discharge.

16 I emphasize that my analysis is independent of the bankruptcy court’s 17 finding of intent. As already noted, all commencements of bankruptcy 18 cases involve, to some extent, an express intent to hinder and delay a 19 creditor. Further, almost all bankruptcy cases involve some measure of 20 transfer in anticipation of the creditor-hindering-or-creditor-delaying 21 bankruptcy; bankruptcy lawyers are paid, creditors are preferred, and in 22 some reasonable regards non-exempt assets become exempt or goods or 23 services essential to day-to-day existence are obtained. These types of 24 transfers do not justify a denial of discharge, so one never need consider 25 a debtor’s intent when causing them. And Hultman provides a firm 26 foundation for a determination that not all transfers are appropriately 27 considered in a § 727(a)(2)(A) context. Adeeb is another such case.

28 In Adeeb, the debtor admitted to making pre-petition transfers with improper intent. 787 F.2d at 1341-42. But, he repented and attempted to retrieve the assets. Id. The Ninth Circuit, thus, reversed the district court and remanded to the bankruptcy court for a determination as to whether recovery had been complete. Id. at 1346. The Ninth Circuit read transferred in § 727(a)(2)(A) as meaning ‘transferred and remained transferred.’ Id. at 1345. And it noted that Congress intended to deny discharge where debtors took actions to keep assets from their creditors by hiding assets or destroying them. Id. The facts here evidence no such improper conduct. Instead, in Hultman, the transfers did not support §727(a)(2)(A) discharge denial.

Id. at *14 (emphasis in original).

1 With respect to the debtor's use of the insurance payment funds to purchase a 2 laptop computer, the dissent in Cooke commented:

3 Moreover, the Ninth Circuit allows debtors to engage in some forms of 4 pre-bankruptcy planning and to protect assets by converting them from 5 non-exempt to exempt. See, e.g., Gill v. Stern (In re Stern), 345 F.3d
6 1036, 1043 (9th Cir. 2003) ("[T]he purposeful conversion of nonexempt 7 assets to exempt assets on the eve of bankruptcy is not fraudulent per 8 se." (quoting Wudrick v. Clements, 451 F.2d 988, 989 (9th Cir. 1971)).
9 The bankruptcy court acknowledged this fact, stating that this was a close 10 case, but finding that combined expenditures from the Funds tipped the 11 balance towards a denial of discharge. In a close case, the bankruptcy 12 court could not find that the purchase of a much-needed tool of [the 13 debtor]'s trade as a student, one that involved use of less than ten percent 14 of the Funds, justified discharge denial.

15 Id. (footnote omitted).

16 In response to the dissent's analysis, the majority in Cooke stated that "[i]n the 17 requisite analysis for this appeal, we need to determine if the bankruptcy court's finding of 18 actual intent was clear error." Id. at *7 n. 7. In addressing the dissent's analysis, citing 19 Hultman, the majority stated:

20 The dissent's analysis doesn't consider intent, but rather questions 21 whether any transfers contemplated by § 727(a)(2) occurred if the 22 transfers constitute preferment of other creditors. See Hultman v. Tevis, 23 82 F.2d 940, 941 (9th Cir. 1936). As noted in First Beverly Bank v. Adeeb 24 (In re Adeeb), 787 F.2d 1339, 1343 (9th Cir. 1986), the real issue in 25 Hultman involved whether the debtor acted with the requisite intent when 26 he "in good faith, believed and relied upon his attorney's advice and acted 27 on it in making the transfer to his son." Id. The Hultman court concludes 28 no other indicia of intent existed, warranting a discharge. The facts in this present appeal distinguish this appeal from Hultman. Although [the debtor] vaguely raised an advice of counsel defense, he inconsistently testified as to whether he talked to his counsel. Further he declined to waive his attorney-client privilege so [the attorney] could testify or submit a declaration as to his advice to [the debtor]. However, in raising such a defense, [the debtor] could not invoke an attorney-client privilege.
Chevron Corp. v. Pennzoil Co., 974 F.2d 1156, 1163 (9th Cir. 1992).

29 Id. at *5 n. 5.

30 With respect to the bankruptcy court's factual findings on intent, the majority in 31 Cooke noted that "[b]eyond the credibility determination, the bankruptcy court also 32 identified several elements as support for the inference that [the debtor] acted with the 33
34

1 requisite intent under § 727(a)(2)(A),” citing what the bankruptcy court considered as 2 reflected in the trial transcript:

3       The bankruptcy court considered: “(1) the timing of the transfer; (2) the 4       amount of the transfer in relation to the remaining property of the debtor; 5       (3) whether the transfer occurred after the entry of a large judgment 6       against the debtor; (4) whether the transfer rendered the debtor insolvent; 7       (5) the debtor’s motivation to make the transfers; and (6) the credibility of 8       the debtor’s explanation regarding the transfers.”

9       Id. at *7 and n. 6, citing, Trial Tr. (Jan.12, 2015) 10:23–11:5.

10       This court has quoted the dissent and majority opinions in Cooke at length 11       because the issues raised are germane to this case, that is, whether, as the dissent in 12       Cooke concluded, based on the Ninth Circuit’s decision in Hultman that some transfers 13       by a bankruptcy debtor, including preferential payments to other creditors, do not support 14       discharge denial as a matter of law. In considering the merits of the analyses of the 15       majority and dissent in Cooke, this court concludes that while the dissent makes cogent 16       points, the majority has the better side of the argument. The majority in Cooke is correct 17       in emphasizing that “[i]n the requisite analysis for this appeal, we need to determine if the 18       bankruptcy court’s finding of actual intent was clear error.” The bankruptcy court’s 19       analysis based on its findings considering “(1) the timing of the transfer; (2) the amount 20       of the transfer in relation to the remaining property of the debtor; (3) whether the transfer 21       occurred after the entry of a large judgment against the debtor; (4) whether the transfer 22       rendered the debtor insolvent; (5) the debtor’s motivation to make the transfers; and (6) 23       the credibility of the debtor’s explanation regarding the transfers” was not clear error, 24       though a reasonable finder of fact could decide differently. Id.

25       In this court’s view, Hultman does not dictate a different result in Cooke or in this 26       case. The Ninth Circuit’s statement in Hultman that “[t]hat the mere fact that a 27       bankruptcy has made a preferential payment or transfer to one of his creditors is no 28       grounds for denying a discharge” does not support the broad reliance of the dissent in 29       Cooke for its proposition that preferential transfers do not support discharge denial as a 30       matter of law and cannot be considered for determining intent for purposes of 11 U.S.C. §

1 727(a)(2)(A). That is not what the Ninth Circuit said in Hultman. As worded, the Ninth 2 Circuit's statement in Hultman that the mere fact of a preferential transfer does not justify 3 discharge denial means that such a transfer by itself is not grounds to deny a discharge, 4 but says nothing about a preferential transfer being considered as evidence of intent in 5 the context of other facts that may evidence intent. The analysis in Hultman indicated 6 that the appropriate inquiry was to determine the existence of an intent on behalf of the 7 debtor to hinder, delay or defraud creditors, which is a fact-based inquiry, and the 8 findings of fact and conclusions of law proposed by the special master adopted by the 9 district court that the debtor lacked such intent was reviewed for clear error, which was 10 affirmed by the Ninth Circuit. The Cooke majority's analysis of Hultman was correct that 11 the district court's finding of lack of intent based on the debtor's reliance on counsel's 12 advice without other evidence of intent was not clearly erroneous and was appropriately 13 affirmed. See also, In re Perrine, 2008 WL 8448835, slip op. at *5-6 (9th Cir. BAP 2008) 14 (unpublished BAP memorandum decision discussing Hultman and acknowledging the 15 Ninth Circuit's determination in that case that the fact that a preferential payment did not 16 necessitate a finding that it was made with an intent to hinder or delay creditors, 17 upholding the district court's finding of lack of intent without additional evidence of intent, 18 but distinguishing Hultman on its facts to uphold discharge denial involving a preferential 19 or fraudulent transfer with additional evidence of intent).

20 The court acknowledges what the Ninth Circuit stated in Hultman about the mere 21 fact that a preferential transfer is not a ground to deny a discharge under 11 U.S.C. § 22 727(a)(2)(A), but the circumstantial evidence in this case supports a finding that 23 Defendant made transfers to prefer creditors, including the home loan lenders holding the 24 First and Second DOTs on the Property and his wife, with the intent to hinder, delay or 25 defraud creditors beyond the mere fact that he made certain preferential transfers to 26 other creditors and, as discussed in more detail below, beyond the mere fact that he 27 converted nonexempt assets into exempt assets.

C. Based on In re Beverly, Defendant “Crossed the Line”

Beyond the previous determination that the court may consider preferential payments to creditors for purposes of determining an intent to hinder, delay or defraud under 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(A), the court is persuaded by the decision and analysis of the Bankruptcy Appellate Panel for the Ninth Circuit (“BAP”) in In re Beverly, which dealt with another issue that is relevant to this case: whether the pre-bankruptcy conversion of non-exempt assets into exempt assets, which is nonfraudulent by itself as a matter of law under the Ninth Circuit’s decision in Gill v. Stern (In re Stern), 345 F.3d 1036, 1044 (9th Cir. 2003), warrants denial of a bankruptcy debtor’s discharge if there was also a subjective intent to hinder, delay or defraud a creditor. In re Beverly, 374 B.R. at 242-246. The court believes the BAP’s framework in that case is instructive here because in addition to Defendant’s use of non-exempt assets to prefer certain creditors prepetition, this case also involves the transfer of non-exempt assets to Defendant’s Wife’s CNB Account which Defendant claimed an exemption in. As discussed in more detail below, the totality of circumstantial evidence in this case shows an intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors to warrant denial of discharge as shown by Defendant’s prepayments of the First and Second DOTs with five advance monthly payments, and transfers to his Wife’s CNB Account which Defendant claimed an exemption in, all of which, like in Beverly, are forms of improper pre-bankruptcy planning that furthered Defendant’s intent to keep certain assets for his personal benefit and out of reach of his creditors who might have received the value of these assets through a bankruptcy distribution.

In Beverly, the BAP reversed the bankruptcy court’s holding that the debtor’s pre-bankruptcy conversion of non-exempt assets to exempt assets during the debtor’s divorce was non-fraudulent as a matter of law for purposes of denying the debtor’s discharge under 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2). Id. at 246. In Beverly, the facts were as follows. The debtor, anticipating a large judgment on a community debt, executed a marital settlement agreement with his wife prepetition whereby he transferred a $1 million

1 interest of non-exempt property to his non-filing wife in exchange for his wife's interest in 2 his $1.1 million exempt retirement fund. Id. at 226-227. By doing so, the debtor would 3 shoulder the impending judgment debt, but having first stripped himself of the non-4 exempt liquid assets with which to pay that debt. Id. at 227. After the debtor filed for 5 bankruptcy, the trustee and the judgment creditor objected to the debtor's discharge 6 under various 11 U.S.C. § 727(a) theories. Id. at 229. The bankruptcy court ruled for the 7 debtor, reasoning that the toleration of bankruptcy exemption planning meant that the 8 discharge cannot be denied because there could not have been an intent to hinder, delay 9 or defraud creditors. Id. at 244.

10 On the creditor's appeal of its 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(A) claim, the BAP in Beverly 11 specifically addressed the relationship between the conversion of non-exempt assets to 12 exempt assets, which is not by itself fraudulent, and an intent to defraud creditors, 13 stating:

14 [I]t is difficult to draw the line between legitimate bankruptcy planning and 15 intent to defraud creditors. Only two things are certain about the line.

16 First, as already explained, denial of discharge involving exemption 17 planning requires that there be evidence other than the mere timing of the transformation of property from nonexempt to exempt status.

18 Second, there is a principle of "too much." In classical terms, it is the Sword 19 of Damocles. In the agrarian terms used by the Fifth Circuit affirming the denial of a discharge, "when a pig becomes a hog it is slaughtered."

20 The reality is that cases finding discharge-disqualifying intent to hinder, 21 delay, or defraud creditors typically involve some combination of large claims of exemption and overtones of overreaching.

22 Id. at 245 (citations omitted). Based upon the fact of the debtor's conversion of at least 23 $424,450 in non-exempt assets to exempt assets and a record replete with evidence that 24 the debtor was fixated on moving assets away from the reach of the judgment creditor, 25 the BAP in Beverly held that the bankruptcy court's factual finding that the debtor did not 26 have the requisite intent to hinder or delay the judgment creditor was clearly erroneous.
27 Id. at 245. In so holding, the court stated,

1 [t]here is a remarkably large volume of evidence of [the debtor]'s intent to 2 hinder or delay that is extrinsic from the fact that he transferred nonexempt 3 property for exempt property in the MSA. As a result, it is beyond cavil that [the debtor]'s intent was to become judgment proof and not just to protect his assets.

4 Id. at 246.

5 Based on the BAP's analytical framework in Beverly regarding the relationship 6 between a debtor's intent and the conversion of assets from nonexempt to exempt status, 7 and based on additional evidence of intent beyond the mere conversion of assets from 8 nonexempt to exempt, the court considers, as discussed below, whether Defendant 9 "crossed the line" based on additional evidence of intent beyond the mere fact that some 10 of the transfers appear to be preferential only when Defendant used his non-exempt 11 assets to make prepetition transfers to preferred payees when he made five months of 12 prepayments to his home lenders totaling $51,000.00 and transferred $38,000.00 to two 13 of his friends on debts allegedly owed to each of them, as well as when Defendant 14 converted non-exempt assets to exempt assets by transferring $86,000.00 to his Wife's 15 CNB Account which Defendant claimed an exemption in.

16 i. Defendant's Prepayments of First and Second DOTs on 17 the Property

18 Regarding the additional evidence of intent beyond the mere preferential 19 payments and conversion of nonexempt assets to exempt assets, and specifically, 20 Defendant's act of prepaying the First and Second DOTs on his home, the court first 21 notes that aside from the timing of Defendant's prepetition transfers of nonexempt assets 22 and the amounts of those transfers, he made multiple admissions in his trial testimony 23 that evidence his intent to hinder or delay his non-preferred creditors. "When a debtor 24 admits that he acted with the intent penalized by section 727(a)(2)(A), there is no need 25 for the court to rely on circumstantial evidence or inferences in determining whether the 26 debtor had the requisite intent." In re Adeeb, 787 F.2d at 1343 ("Adeeb admitted that he 27 transferred the property intending to put it out of the reach of one of his creditors.").
28 Additionally, entry of a discharge order should be denied if a debtor "had the intent

1 penalized by the statute notwithstanding any other motivation he may have had for the 2 transfer.” Id. at 1343; accord, In re Beverly, 374 B.R. at 246; cf. Matter of Trinity Baptist
3 Church, 25 B.R. 529, 532-533 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1982) (analyzing fraudulent transfer 4 claim under Florida law) (“Intent to defraud within the meaning of the statute is the 5 debtor’s intention to prevent his creditors from satisfying their debts . . . An evil motive is 6 not required in order to set aside a transfer.”) (citations omitted).

7 Specifically, at his Rule 2004 examination, Defendant testified to the following:

8 Well, at the time that the payments were made – let’s see. . . . July was the 9 prepayment[,] by then the case had been decided, and I didn’t know what I 10 was going to do. Really, we were trying to make up our mind what we were 11 going to do, and then I just wanted to make sure that those -- that whatever 12 happened -- I mean, I got a threatening letter. I got threatening letters from the beginnings of what might have been attempts to collect money or whatever, and I just wanted to make sure that we wouldn’t be thrown out in the street.

13 Well, I got -- well, the award in and of itself was pretty breathtaking. When I 14 got the notice of the award, that was F.I.N.R.A., and the F.I.N.R.A. fees. I 15 didn’t know if I would lose my license. I didn’t. J.P. Morgan, obviously, they 16 had sent me by July -- yeah. They had sent me a letter by then saying they 17 wanted their money. And who else was there? I was having a fee disputes.
That’s another thing. I was having a fee dispute. I found out that I was grossly overcharged by the attorneys I used first, and I got several attorneys’ opinions, and so I was possibly fighting with them. Whatever else was going to go on, I wanted to make sure my family was at least ensconced in our home until the end of the year.
[. . .]

19 Its a priority of survival. I wanted to make sure we had a home to live in and a place to live in while all this was going on.

20 Well, I didn’t know if, for example, Shustak had gotten a judgment, which he 21 didn’t. They threw him out of court, but he kept trying to do things. I didn’t 22 know where -- I felt under siege. I guess you can understand that. So I had to prioritize where this money went, and other than food and other -- certain other things that had to be accounted -- you know, taken care of. This was a pretty important piece of that puzzle.

23 Furthermore, at trial, Defendant testified that he thought of prepaying his home 24 loans by five months because “I had the money at that time and I wanted to make sure 25 my family was protected and that I had paid my primary obligation to them for that period 26 of time”, Trial Testimony of Joseph Ellison, November 19, 2015 at 9:22 a.m., and that a 27 primary motivation behind his prepayments was that he was concerned about his prior 28

1 lawyer, Shustak, who he was having a fee dispute with, and who has a disputed claim in 2 Defendant's bankruptcy case, "from coming in and attaching his assets", Trial Testimony
3 of Joseph Ellison, November 19, 2015 at 9:24-9:25 a.m. In re Adeeb, 787 F.2d at 1343 4 ("Adeeb admitted that he transferred the property intending to put it out of the reach of 5 one of his creditors."). Although Defendant had a benign motive of protecting his family, 6 the evidence otherwise indicates that he still had the intent to hinder or delay his 7 creditors. Matter of Trinity Baptist Church, 25 B.R. at 532-533 (mixed motive of a debtor 8 does not defeat a finding of intent, stating: "Clearly, the Debtor intended to hold those 9 dissatisfied creditors at bay, and prevent levy and sale of the property, in hopes of 10 rehabilitation and the satisfaction of all creditors. While admirable, the end result of this 11 scheme was nonetheless hindrance and delay of creditors.").

12 Moreover, Defendant testified that he prepaid the home loans secured by the First 13 and Second DOTs "to assure that my wife and my daughter and myself had a home to 14 live in through the end of the year . . . I did prepay [the mortgage in the past] but not to 15 that degree, not six months, or four months, five months, whatever it was in advance, 16 normally." Trial Testimony of Joseph Ellison, November 19, 2015 at 10:43 a.m. This out 17 of the ordinary course transaction and Defendant's admissions are additional evidence of 18 his intent to hinder or delay his creditors by putting these funds out of their reach for his 19 personal benefit. Silagy v. Morris (In re Morris), 2013 WL 5705630, slip op. at *17 20 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 2013) (transfers of debtor's property in exchange for waiver of future 21 child support was a badge of fraud due to detriment of debtor's current creditors 22 indicating intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors as fraudulent transfer under 11 23 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(A)), objections to bankruptcy court's proposed findings of fact and 24 conclusions of law overruled in pertinent part and sustained in part on other grounds, 25 2015 WL 853499 (N.D. Ohio 2015). In holding that the debtor's transfers of her equity in 26 the marital residence to her spouse in a marital dissolution for a waiver of her future child 27
28

1 support obligations was a badge of fraud with respect to her current creditors, the 2 bankruptcy court stated in In re Morris:

3 Debtor's actions amount to accelerating an unmatured, future obligation and 4 allowed her to prepay it. Assets that were immediately available, equity in 5 the real estate, were traded for a future obligation that has not yet come 6 due. This is little different than allowing a debtor to prepay ten years of rent 7 or any other future expense saving tactic at the expense of current creditors holding liquidated, matured debts. While this action has not been previously listed as a badge of fraud, under the particular facts of this case, the court finds that the transaction increases the overall likelihood of actual fraudulent intent.

8 2013 WL 5705630, slip op. at *17. The court in In re Morris also held that the transfer 9 was also constructively fraudulent because prepayment of a future obligation was not 10 reasonably equivalent value and the transfer harmed creditors:

11 . . . Debtor should not be able to reduce the amount she will pay to her 12 current creditors by either obtaining a waiver of a future obligation or 13 withholding money to satisfy a future debt. For example, a debtor should 14 not be allowed to set aside money for her next five years of rent under the 15 guise that the money will be used to pay her future creditor (the landlord) at 16 the expense of her current creditors. In In re Strasser, a debtor moved 17 $62,000 out of reach of her current creditors by transferring the money to 18 her father, who then gave the money back to the debtor for the payment of 19 her living expenses. 303 B.R. 841, 847-48 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2004). The 20 court held that the debtor should not be able to harm her current creditors by withholding money under the guise that the property would be used to pay her future expenses, and therefore her future creditors. Id. Such an action is putting money out of the reach of current creditors, and then claiming 'no harm no foul, I used it on my future creditors.' Id. (internal quotation marks omitted). While the facts are different in the current case, the theory is the same: Debtor is not allowed to give significant value to her future creditors in order to harm her current creditors. For the above reason, the court will not consider the waiver of the child support in calculating reasonable equivalence.

21 2013 WL 5705630, slip op. at *11.

22 Under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act (now the Uniform Voidable 23 Transactions Act), a transfer is constructively fraudulent if the debtor made the transfer 24 without receiving a reasonably equivalent value for the transfer in exchange for the 25 transfer and the debtor was insolvent at the time of the transfer or became insolvent as 26 result of the transfer. California Civil Code § 3439.05(a). Although the finding of lack of 27 reasonably equivalent value was made in support of the holding of constructive 28

1 fraudulent transfer in In re Morris, though not directly relevant for a claim under 11 U.S.C.
2 § 727(a)(2), such a finding would itself be a badge of fraud indicating actual intent to 3 hinder, delay or defraud current creditors under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act (now 4 Uniform Voidable Transactions Act) and under the Ninth Circuit's listing of badges of 5 fraud in In re Woodfield, supra. California Civil Code § 3439.04(b)(8) (“(8) Whether the 6 value of the consideration received by the debtor was reasonably equivalent to the value
7 of the asset transferred or the amount of the obligation incurred.”); In re Woodfield, 978
8 F.3d at 518 (“(6) that the Debtor received inadequate consideration for the transfer.”) 9 (citations omitted).

10 Although Defendant might have argued that the prepayments of the home loans 11 are not indicative of an intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors because these 12 payments to the home lenders were to fully secured creditors, the court would not be 13 persuaded by such. See Pioneer Liquidating Corp. v. San Diego Trust & Savings Bank, 14 211 B.R. at 717 (S.D. Cal. 1997) (holding that payment to a fully secured creditor does 15 not hinder, delay or defraud creditors because it does not put assets otherwise available 16 in a bankruptcy distribution out of the reach of other creditors), cited in, Henry v. Lehman 17 Commercial Paper, Inc. (In re First Alliance Mortgage Co.), 471 F.3d 977, 1008 (9th Cir.
18 2006). This argument fails under the circumstances of this case because Defendant had 19 refinanced his existing home loans by taking out new home loans to repay the old ones 20 and to extract and monetize the existing equity in his home that was otherwise available 21 to pay his current creditors. Defendant took out the surplus refinancing proceeds, which 22 were converted home equity, and transferred such proceeds for his personal purposes 23 rather than to pay debt to current creditors. Defendant made transfers to his wife, and he 24 made prepayments on his new home loans five months in advance as he admitted so he 25 and his family had a place to live. Although the new home lenders are secured creditors, 26 the liens they hold are based on trust deeds on the home as real property, and not on the 27 surplus refinancing proceeds. Findings of Fact Nos. 18-22. Defendant's transfers in his 28

1 home loan prepayments from the refinancing proceeds were thus not payments of the 2 home lenders as fully secured creditors from their collateral, the home itself, which is 3 different from the circumstances in Pioneer Liquidating Corp. v. San Diego Trust & 4 Savings Bank, supra, where the fully secured lender was paid from its collateral on which 5 it had a security interest, which was held not to be a transfer involving an intent to hinder, 6 delay or defraud creditors since there was no diminution of the bankruptcy estate as the 7 transferred assets were fully encumbered by the secured creditor's lien. This is not the 8 situation here because the funds used to make Defendant's home loan prepayments 9 were from the surplus refinancing proceeds from his converted home equity, which were 10 prepetition assets not encumbered by the home lenders' security interests, and thus, 11 these funds had been prepetition assets otherwise available to his current creditors which 12 he put out of their reach resulting in a diminution of the bankruptcy estate. Why this is 13 overreaching and improper is that Defendant converted the prepetition asset of 14 nonexempt home equity available to pay prepetition debts for which he was legally 15 obligated to pay at the time into a postpetition asset by prepaying his future obligations 16 which were not yet legally due, thus, diminishing the pool of prepetition assets available 17 to pay current creditors otherwise barred from further collection due to the bankruptcy 18 discharge and relieving him of having to use his postpetition assets to pay debts for 19 which he had to pay in the future, but he did not yet have to pay at the time, and 20 conferring a financial benefit to him at the expense of his current creditors. Accordingly, 21 the court finds on this record that Defendant's transfers of $41,415.30 and $11,062.00 to 22 prepay his home loans for five months are badges of fraud indicating an intent to hinder, 23 delay or defraud his current creditors, including JP Morgan Chase, by putting these 24 otherwise available assets out of the reach of these creditors and by not receiving 25 reasonably equivalent value in doing so.

26        Additionally, Defendant testified that prior to filing his bankruptcy petition, he met 27 with an asset protection firm, and one of his goals in doing so was to potentially protect 28

1 his assets from potential creditors. Trial Testimony of Joseph Ellison, November 19, 2 2015 at 10:58-10:59 a.m. These admitted facts of Defendant's knowledge and planning 3 are additional evidence of his intent to hinder or delay his creditors. Accordingly, based 4 on the Ninth Circuit's decisions in Adeeb and Retz, the court determines that Defendant's 5 admissions that he prepaid the home loans secured by the First and Second DOTs to 6 prevent other creditors from gaining access to equity in the Property and collecting on 7 those assets, constitutes additional and sufficient evidence of an actual intent to hinder, 8 delay or defraud creditors beyond the mere fact of making preferential transfers, and 9 thus, establishes a claim to deny Defendant's discharge under 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(A).
10 Furthermore, based on the analytical framework set forth in Beverly, the court also 11 determines that such admissions constitute evidence of defendant's actual intent to 12 hinder, delay or defraud his creditors beyond the mere fact of the timing of using non-13 exempt funds to prepay the home loans secured by the First and Second DOTs 14 immediately before he filed for bankruptcy.

15 Defendant's admissions notwithstanding, the sequence of events preceding the 16 filing of his bankruptcy petition provides circumstantial evidence of his actual intent to 17 hinder or defraud his creditors. See In re Beverly, 374 B.R. at 243 (for the purposes of 18 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(A), intent to hinder, delay, or defraud may be established by 19 circumstantial evidence or by inferences drawn from a course of conduct); In re Adeeb, 20 787 F.2d at 1343, citing, In re Devers, 759 F.2d 751, 755 (9th Cir. 1985). The Ninth 21 Circuit in Woodfield identified certain "badges of fraud" indicative of circumstantial 22 evidence of an intent to hinder or defraud, which can be found here, including factors (1) 23 a close relationship between the transferor (Debtor) and the transferee (his wife and 24 friends); (2) that the transfers were in anticipation of a pending suit (Plaintiffs' 25 counterclaims in the FINRA Action and suit to confirm their award); (3) that the transferor 26 Debtor was insolvent or in poor financial condition at the time (Defendant's filing of his 27 bankruptcy case with his schedules showing insufficient nonexempt assets to pay his 28

1 outstanding debts); (4) that all or substantially all of the Debtor's property was transferred 2 (prepetition payment of preferred parties, his wife, his friends and his home lenders, and 3 Debtor's conversion of nonexempt assets into exempt assets); (5) that the transfers so 4 completely depleted the Debtor's assets that the creditors have been hindered or delayed 5 in recovering any part of the judgment (reduction of most, if not all, value in nonexempt 6 assets as of the petition date). In re Woodfield, 978 F.2d at 518.

7 Defendant took out the equity from the Property and used the proceeds to pay his 8 wife, friends, and the First DOT and the Second DOT on the Property so that his family 9 could continue to retain the benefits of the funds and live in the Property. As a result of 10 Defendant depleting the equity in the Property through the refinancing and prepetition 11 transfers, there is little or no equity in the Property available to pay nonpreferred creditors 12 through Defendant's bankruptcy case. Though the refinancing transactions, Defendant 13 pulled out net equity of almost $250,000 from his residence, solving his practical problem 14 of shielding the nonexempt equity from his creditors based on the limited $100,000
15 homestead exemption for Defendant and his spouse as a "family unit" under California 16 Code of Civil Procedure § 704.730(a)(2). Likewise, as a result of the transfers, the 17 disbursed funds, which would have otherwise remained in Defendant's [unencumbered] 18 CNB Account, are also unavailable for distribution to Defendant's unsecured creditors.
19 Defendant's nonpreferred unsecured creditors, JPMorgan and Shustak, representing 90 20 percent of the value of Defendant's general unsecured claims, are thus likely to recover 21 little or nothing from Defendant's bankruptcy estate in light of Defendant's prepetition 22 transfers, while he continues to benefit from these transfers diverting his assets which 23 would have otherwise been intended and available for distribution to these creditors in 24 this bankruptcy case.

25 According to Defendant's bankruptcy schedules, his real property asset, the home, 26 is fully encumbered, and of his personal property assets with a total value of 27 $303,587.00, most of the value of these assets is claimed as exempt in the amount of 28

1 $254,673.00, leaving a net of $48,914.00 as non-exempt property. Schedule A-Real 2 Property, Schedule B-Personal Property, Schedule C-Property Claimed as Exempt, 3 Petition, Exhibit 8 at 13-21. Most of the value of Defendant's nonexempt assets comes 4 from an account receivable valued at $35,914.00, which he says is owed from his former 5 employer, Morgan Stanley, in company stock from a performance award, and is thus not 6 traceable to the subject transfers from Defendant's converted home equity. Schedule B-7 Personal Property, Petition, Exhibit 8 at 17. In comparison, on March 1, 2014, Defendant 8 received the funds of $247,950.85 disbursed to him from the refinancing of his home not 9 claimed as exempt on his bankruptcy schedules representing the home equity that he 10 took out and converted for his use, and not available to pay claims of current creditors, 11 including the transfers discussed herein. These circumstances indicate perfect 12 prebankruptcy planning from Defendant's perspective because through the transfers, he 13 was able to extract the net equity of almost $250,000 from his home and provide for 14 himself and his family and his preferred creditors, leaving almost nothing for his 15 nonpreferred creditors, despite the limited $100,000 homestead exemption, and are the 16 result of Defendant's design and actual intent to hinder or delay his creditors.

17 Furthermore, the court also observes that the timing, quantity, and circumstances 18 surrounding Defendant's transfers—which occurred while the FINRA Action was pending, 19 while an evidentiary hearing was ongoing, while the issuance of an adverse FINRA 20 award was imminent, and shortly after the issuance of the FINRA award, highlight that 21 Defendant made the transfers intending to hinder creditors' ability to recover from his 22 assets. Moreover, within the five months preceding the Petition Date and while the 23 FINRA Action was pending, Defendant sought the assistance of an asset protection law 24 firm to create an asset protection trust and establish a Limited Liability Limited 25 Partnership (LLLP) to shield his assets from creditors, and while Defendant said that he 26 changed his mind about forming the asset protection trust and tried to instruct the asset 27 protection law firm not to go ahead with the trust formation, such consultation reflects 28

1 Defendant's state of mind with an awareness and intent not to pay his nonpreferred 2 creditors. During this same time period, Defendant then refinanced the loans on the 3 Property and, in the process, took out cash of nearly $250,000.00 from the equity in the 4 Property, and then transferred much of this cash to pay preferred parties, his wife and his 5 home lenders, notably, so he would be able to stay in his residence through advance 6 loan payments.

7 ii. Defendant's Prepetition Transfers to His Friends

8 Nonetheless, regarding Defendant's $38,000 of prepetition payments to his 9 friends, the court does not find that such payments by themselves indicate an intent to 10 hinder, delay or defraud his other creditors because the evidence indicates that 11 Defendant was repaying loan obligations to them, which makes these transfers only 12 preferential payments to these creditors, which transfers by themselves do not indicate 13 an intent to hinder, delay or defraud under applicable law. California Civil Code § 3432; 14 Hultman v. Tevis, supra. According to Defendant, Mr. Springer had advanced Defendant 15 $30,000 in advance capital for a joint business venture that they were going to have, and 16 that he did not have a contractual or written obligation to repay him, and Mr. Jeffers had 17 loaned him $8,000.00 to help him pay personal expenses, and that he did not have a 18 written agreement to repay the loan. Trial Testimony of Joseph Ellison, November 19, 19 2015 at 10:46-10:48 a.m. The court determines that Defendant's payment of $30,000.00 20 to Mr. Springer was to repay money held by Defendant for their joint business venture, 21 but the money belonged to Mr. Jeffers, and not Defendant, as the evidence does not 22 indicate that a gift to Defendant was intended. The court further determines that 23 Defendant's payment of $8,000.00 to Mr. Jeffers was to repay a loan made by Mr. Jeffers 24 to Defendant. These transfers, while preferential, do not indicate an intent to hinder, 25 delay or defraud other creditors.

26 ///

iii. Defendant's Prepetition Transfers to His Wife's CNB Account

Regarding Defendant's prepetition transfers to his Wife's CNB Account, by transferring a total of $86,000.00 to his wife prepetition, Defendant hindered, delayed and defrauded his creditors' ability to collect on their claims by putting these funds out of his name and into his wife's name and control, which transactions do not exemplify the actions of an "honest but unfortunate debtor." See Grogan v. Garner, 498 U.S. at 286-287. Specifically, six days after the conclusion of a week-long evidentiary hearing in the FINRA Action, Defendant transferred $18,000.00 to his wife's CNB Account. One week after the FINRA Award issued, Defendant, through two transactions, transferred an additional $51,000.00 to his wife's CNB Account because he was worried about what would happen, he wanted to retain the funds to benefit him and his family, and he did not want anyone to gain access to these funds. Defendant's wife is an insider for purposes of the Bankruptcy Code pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 101(31)(A)(i) as a relative of an individual debtor. See Hahn v. Leong (In re Llamas), 2011 WL 7637254, slip op. at *7 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2011) (dicta in unpublished opinion holding former spouse is not an insider) ("Insider," as defined in § 101(31), specifically includes the spouse of the debtor . . . ), citing, Miller v. v. Schuman, 81 B.R. 583, 585 (9th Cir. BAP 1987) ("A spouse of the debtor is a relative . . . because the definition includes individuals 'related by affinity.'" ) (dicta as holding related to former spouse). Defendant's pattern of asset diversions to his wife continued all the way to the Petition Date, when Defendant transferred an additional $17,000.00 to his wife. Given that within three months of the Petition Date, Defendant transferred at least $86,000.00 from the CNB account in his name to his Wife's CNB Account in which, as previously stated, Defendant had a community property interest, and given that the account belonged to his wife's law practice and that Defendant was not a signatory on the account, the court determines that through such transfers, Defendant intended to hinder, delay and defraud creditors by

1 making it difficult for them to collect on their claims because they would have had to 2 establish that his interest in property no longer in his name was still his, having 3 transferred funds in his name to another. See In re Woodfield, 978 F.2d at 518 (intent 4 may be inferred from certain “badges of fraud” that constitute circumstantial evidence of 5 intent, including a close relationship between the transferor and the transferee); 6 California Civil Code § 3439.04(b)(1) and (2) (“(1) Whether the transfer or obligation was 7 to an insider” and “(2) Whether the debtor retained possession or control of the property
8 transferred after the transfer”); 6 Resnick and Sommer, Collier on Bankruptcy, ¶ 9 727.02[3][b] at 727-18 and n. 37 (“The fact that a transfer is to a relative or close 10 associate can also be indicative of fraud, as can the debtor’s retaining possession, 11 benefits or use of the property that was transferred.”), citing Pavy v. Chastant (In re 12 Chastant), 873 F.2d 89 (5th Cir. 1989).

13 Defendant argues that the transfers to his wife of $86,000 in the three months 14 before his bankruptcy case was filed were to “pay customary bills,” but there is no 15 evidence to corroborate Defendant’s testimony that this was the purpose of the transfers 16 and for the court to determine that such “customary” bills were reasonable living 17 expenses. See Defendant’s Post-Trial Proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions of 18 Law, ECF 27 at 6-7, citing inter alia, Trial Testimony of Joseph Ellison, November 19, 19 2015 at 9:16 a.m. and 9:51-9:52 a.m. The court cannot accept at face value Defendant’s 20 assertion that his wife used the funds transferred by him to her bank account to pay 21 “customary bills”, implicitly suggesting that her use of the transferred funds was 22 reasonable or justifiable, since he admitted in his testimony that her bank account was 23 her own account, that he had nothing to do with it, that he was not a signatory on her 24 bank account, and had no control over the account, thus indicating that he may not have 25 personal knowledge of what she did with the funds transferred to her bank account. Trial
26 Testimony of Joseph Ellison, November 19, 2015 at 9:16 a.m. and 9:16-9:18 a.m.; 27 Federal Rule of Evidence 602 (A witness may testify to a matter only if evidence is 28

1 introduced sufficient to support a finding that the witness has personal knowledge of the 2 matter. . . .”). The only person with personal knowledge of what Defendant’s wife did with 3 the funds transferred to her bank account over which she had sole control was the wife, 4 and she did not testify at trial. It appears that he would only have known what she did 5 with the transferred funds based on what she told him. Thus, the court determines that 6 Defendant’s testimony as to what his wife did with the transferred funds is not credible 7 because he has not provided a foundation for the court to make a finding that he has 8 personal knowledge of that matter, and that the court otherwise has no reliable evidence 9 as to what Defendant’s wife did with the funds that Defendant transferred to her account, 10 that is, there is no way of ascertaining from this record whether she used the funds to 11 make preferential transfers to existing creditors, which may indicate a lack of intent to 12 hinder, delay or defraud, or she went on a shopping spree before Defendant filed his 13 bankruptcy case, which may indicate such intent. Given the timing of the transfers by 14 Defendant to his wife’s bank account and the amounts transferred within three months of 15 his filing this bankruptcy case totaling $86,000, of which only $25,793 was listed in her 16 bank account on his bankruptcy schedules, the court infers that the unaccounted for 17 amount of about $61,000 was dissipated for the benefit of Defendant and his wife to 18 avoid paying his nonpreferred creditors, which is similar to the situation in In re Cooke, 19 supra, i.e., expenditures for the personal benefit of the debtor rather than payment of 20 current creditors.

21 According to Defendant, the $18,000 transferred to his wife right before the 22 petition date is accounted for on his bankruptcy schedules as his community property 23 interest in his wife’s bank account which is a listed asset on Schedule B-Personal 24 Property (i.e., part of the $25,793 listed on Schedule B for her account). Id. at 7. This 25 interest is claimed as exempt on Schedule C-Property Claimed as Exempt and is 26 apparently intended to pay for “customary bills” in the future (i.e., postpetition). Exhibit 8 27 at 21; see In re Beverly, 374 B.R. at 245 (“Even if the exemption is not defeated, the 28

1 existence of intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors nevertheless may warrant denial 2 of discharge under § 727(a)(2).”), citing inter alia, Norwest Bank Neb., N.A. v. Tveten, 3 848 F.2d 871, 874-876 (8th Cir. 1988) (“debtor did not want a mere fresh start, he wanted 4 a head start”) (emphasis in original; internal quotation marks omitted). Thus, the 5 circumstances of Defendant’s transfers to his wife go beyond the mere fact that 6 Defendant converted his nonexempt home equity to exempt property to be outside the 7 holding of Gill v. Stern, supra. See also, In re Beverly, 374 B.R. at 240-241 (discussing 8 Gill v. Stern, supra, in that it involved a transfer from one form of exempt asset to another 9 form of exempt asset, and was “not a simple instance of eve-of-bankruptcy exemption 10 planning”).

11 iv. Defendant’s Other Prepetition Transfers Right Before 12 Filing for Bankruptcy

13 At or just before the petition date, Defendant also transferred $31,600.00 from 14 Defendant’s non-exempt Joint Account to various destinations. Aside from the 15 $17,000.00 transfer to his wife on the Petition Date, which was discussed above 16 regarding his transfers to his wife, Defendant made two transfers to benefit himself and 17 his wife by making a contribution of $6,500.00 to a Roth Individual Retirement Account 18 (IRA) in his name and a contribution of $6,500.00 to a Roth IRA in his wife’s name.
19 Apparently, these were new accounts because Defendant’s bankruptcy schedules only 20 show the amounts of these contributions in the accounts. See Defendant’s Post-Trial
21 Proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law, ECF 27 at 6-7. Both of these assets 22 are claimed by Defendant as exempt. Id.; see also, In re Beverly, 374 B.R. at 245 (“Even 23 if the exemption is not defeated, the existence of intent to hinder, delay, or defraud 24 creditors may warrant denial of discharge under § 727(a)(2).”) (citations omitted). These 25 transfers are additional evidence of Defendant’s actual intent to hinder or delay his 26 creditors in light of the other circumstances of his transfers in this case as discussed 27 herein.

1       ///

2                               v.       The Totality of Circumstances Showing Defendant's
3                               Actual Intent to Hinder, Delay or Defraud Creditors

4       The court considers Defendant's admitted animus towards JPMorgan and his fear 5 of former counsel, Shustak, obtaining a judgment and levying Defendant's CNB Account, 6 as further evidence of his actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors through his 7 prepetition asset transfers. Defendant has been open about his hostility towards both 8 creditors, who and which are the largest unsecured creditors in his bankruptcy case, and 9 the transfer of Defendant's property prevented the distribution of the value of such 10 property to these creditors. Indeed, if Defendant had not transferred the funds, the funds 11 would be in Defendant's CNB Account and available for distribution as part of the 12 bankruptcy estate. For instance, had Defendant not made the transfers to Dovenmuehle 13 Mortgage and Logan Investments, $52,477.30 would have been in Defendant's CNB 14 Account on the Petition Date, would have become part of the bankruptcy estate by 15 operation of law, and thus, would have been available for distribution to Defendant's 16 unsecured creditors. The same is true for all of Defendant's prepetition transfers.
17 Indeed, Defendant recognized that, absent the transfers, the funds would be available to 18 benefit his creditors, including JPMorgan and Shustak. In order to avoid that outcome 19 however, Defendant admitted at trial that he "had to prioritize where this money went" 20 and the court determines that he made the various transfers at issue to his wife and 21 preferred creditors in the weeks preceding the Petition Date to ensure the funds were 22 distributed, as he, and not the Bankruptcy Code, deemed appropriate.

23       The court concludes that under these circumstances, as in Beverly, Defendant's 24 prepetition transfers were "too much" because they involved a large dilution of non-25 exempt assets. In re Beverly, 374 B.R. at 245. On or about March 1, 2014, before 26 Defendant prepaid the loans secured by the First and Second DOTs on the Property, 27 Defendant had at least $247,950.85 in his CNB Account, and considering that Defendant 28

1 did not claim an exemption in his CNB account, Defendant would have had non-exempt
2 assets of at least $247,950.85 that could have been used to pay Defendant's unsecured 3 creditors. After the various transfers described above, Defendant had only $600.00 in his 4 CNB Account on the Petition Date, and almost no assets with which to pay his non-5 preferred creditors like Plaintiffs and Shustak. Furthermore, as detailed above, the 6 record is replete with evidence that Defendant focused on preventing his non-preferred 7 creditors from reaching the value in his assets, including the nonexempt equity in the 8 Property. Accordingly, based on the dilution of at least $247,350.85 in non-exempt 9 assets, leaving little to pay the claims of nonpreferred creditors shortly before filing for 10 bankruptcy, who would be otherwise barred from collecting due to the bankruptcy 11 discharge, and the dilution of the pool of prepetition assets included Defendant's 12 transfers of $52,000.00 in non-ordinary course prepayment of his home loans (i.e., 13 paying future creditors as opposed to current nonpreferred creditors), and his insider 14 transfers of $86,000.00 to his wife, and based on evidence of Defendant's prior animus 15 towards, and intent not to pay, his nonpreferred creditors, such as JPMorgan, including 16 express admissions, the court determines that Defendant undertook the prepetition 17 transfers involving large claims of exemption and overtones of overreaching, like the 18 debtor in Beverly, in an effort to become judgment proof as to his non-preferred creditors, 19 including JPMorgan and Shustak, and thwart their collection efforts against him, and the 20 evidence surrounding the circumstances of these transfers demonstrate his intent to 21 hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors to warrant denial of his bankruptcy discharge under 22 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(A).

23 In making such a determination in this case, the court does not intend to "draw a 24 line" that demarcates the line between permissible and impermissible prebankruptcy 25 planning, but rather, the court determines that based on the additional and sufficient 26 evidence of intent presented in this case beyond the mere fact that Defendant made 27 some preferential transfers to other creditors immediately preceding his bankruptcy filing, 28

1 and beyond the mere fact that Defendant converted nonexempt assets to exempt assets, 2 Defendant “crossed over the line” of what is permissible behavior. See In re Beverly, 374
3 B.R. at 244-246 (discussing the difficulty in drawing the line between legitimate 4 bankruptcy planning and intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors). Accordingly, the 5 court determines that under the totality of the circumstances here, the preponderance of 6 the evidence shows that Defendant transferred property prepetition with the intent to 7 hinder, delay or defraud creditors, and therefore, the court should deny the entry of a 8 discharge order in Defendant’s bankruptcy case under 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(A).

9 II. Postpetition Transfers Under 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(B)

10 Through their complaint, Plaintiffs argue that Defendant’s discharge should be 11 denied pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(B). Nonetheless, the court observes that 12 Plaintiffs abandoned this claim by failing to introduce evidence supporting the existence 13 of any postpetition transfers and by failing to argue such at trial. Accordingly, the court 14 denies Plaintiffs’ claim under 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(B) for lack of proof.

15 III. Conclusion

16 For the foregoing reasons, the court determines that there is adequate and 17 sufficient evidence to establish by a preponderance that Defendant made prepetition 18 transfers to preferred parties with actual intent to hinder or delay non-preferred creditors, 19 including JPMorgan and Shustak, and therefore, Defendant’s discharge should be denied 20 pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(A).

21 ///

1 This memorandum decision constitutes the court's findings of fact and conclusions
2 of law pursuant to Rule 7052 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure and Rule 52
3 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. A separate judgment is being entered 4 concurrently.

5 IT IS SO ORDERED.

6 ###
7
8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21
22

23 Date: September 23, 2016

24 Robert Kwan
25 United States Bankruptcy Judge 26 27 28